This is our Hallahan,
School that we love;
Blue-white her lamp rays
Great is her glory,
Blessed are her powers;
This is our Hallahan,
This school is ours.
Mary's our model,
Faith is our guide;
They lead us onward,
Strong at our side.
God bless our banners,
Spirit that flowers;
This is our Hallahan,
This school is ours.

Blue-white Her Lamp Rays Shine

From Above

THIS IS OUR HALLAHAN—where the light of faith gleams brightly from the lamp held high to guide us, its blue-white rays piercing the darkness of error, revealing the brilliance of truth; its flame of wisdom verified and sanctified by the symbol of Christ, a handle for our hands. On the path of life we walk securely following the radiance of our Hallahan.

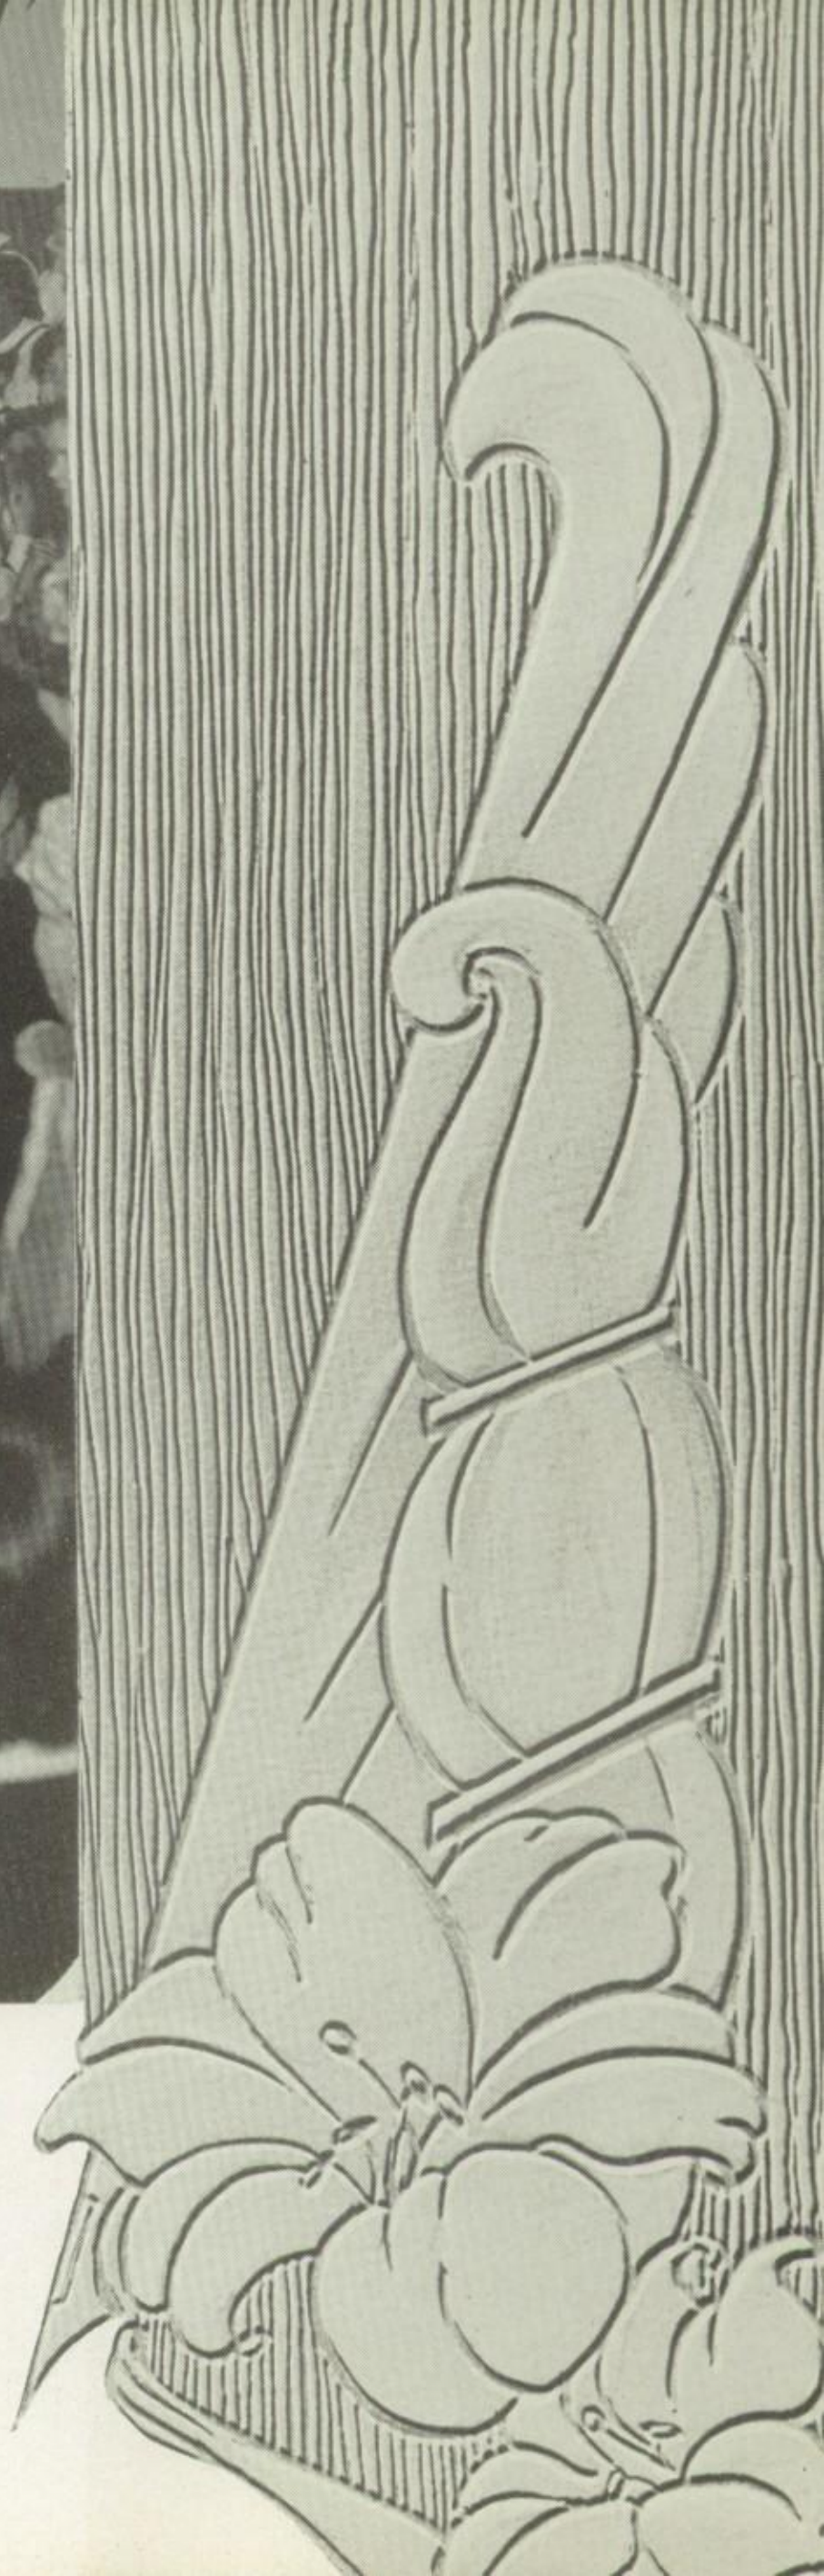

THIS IS OUR HALLAHAN—where the glory of Alma Mater emanates from the sound Catholic philosophy of education—the training of the whole child—from the wholesomeness of youthful activities, the industry of applied study and learning, the purity of heart of young Catholic womanhood.

St. Peter's Annex

Hoping to be future editors of SILVER SANDS or SAND SCRIPT, these ambitious freshmen at St. Peter's Annex edit SANDY JUNIOR. Mary Byrne, Eileen McIntyre, Marie McCarthy, Rita Rotter, and Jacqueline Cullen are on the alert for ideas to be put in print.

The freshmen of Hallahan share in her glory while attending St. Peter's Annex. They participate in such activities as the orchestra, band, and basketball. They follow the regular freshman curriculum, which includes history, algebra, and a choice of the languages, Spanish, French, and Latin. There are regular gymnasium and art classes together with rehearsals and practices for the glee club, which are held in the morning and afternoon. The close association that exists between the main building and St. Peter's helps make possible the uniform carrying out of plans. There is also evident in St. Peter's Annex a spirit of loyalty, friendship, and enthusiasm toward the mother school.

Spanish, with its ancient culture and modern appeal, ranks high among the freshmen. Here we see Senorita Joan Adams quizzing a group of freshmen in the intricacies of Spanish grammar.

French pupils at St. Peter's Annex prove they have grasped Madame Sarlo's lesson when they respond eagerly to the question posed by Dolores Borosiewicz.

Ever ancient, ever new—the Latin language. St. Peter's freshmen Anne Marie Bellesorte, Cecilia Falcone, and Mary Ann Barcius demonstrate to the class how simply diagramming Latin sentences is done.

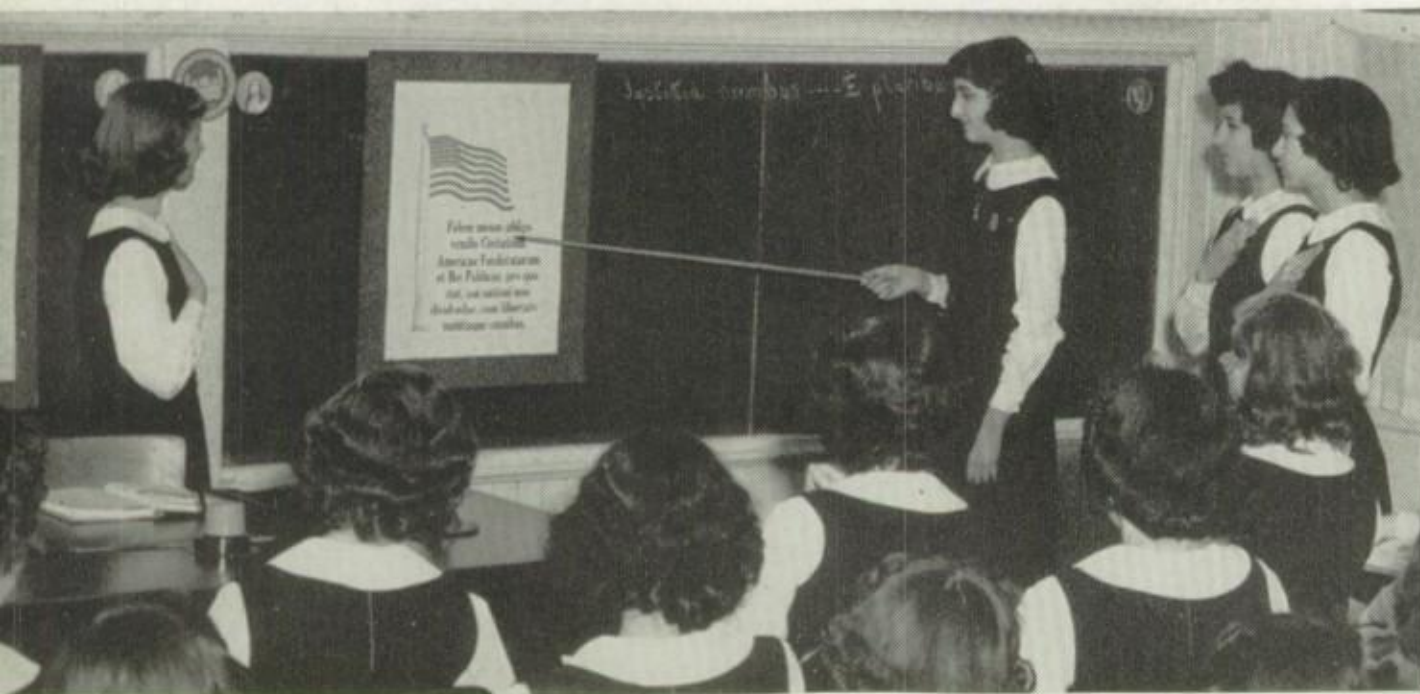

Young historians Patricia Cornell, Elizabeth Blessing, Margaref Flanagan, Rose Ann Windfelder, and Diane Whittle very earnestly follow Madeline Giargiari as she demonstrates a lesson on the development of feudalism in Europe.

St. Thomas's Annex

St. Thomas's Annex, the smaller of the two annexes, is located at Seventeenth and Morris Streets. With its sister annex, it contains the freshmen who will some day be the leaders of Hallahan. They participate wholeheartedly in the various activities and drives which contribute to the honor of the Blue and White and show enthusiasm in their eager following of sports events. They exhibit true Hallahan spirit by their fine cooperation. They promise to be a credit to Alma Mater when they arrive at the main building and pay allegiance to the blue and gray instead of the traditional freshman green.

Versatile freshmen demonstrate their ability in languages by pledging allegiance to the flag of the United States of America in the classical Latin tongue. Patricia Romeo, Carmella Romanelli, Josephine Talotta, and Marie Sica lead the other members of the class.

The study of World History gives the freshman student a good background for her later social studies. Here Anna Marie Norton is shown pointing to a map of Europe as she explains the rise and fall of the Austrian Empire.

Barbara Labowitz, Elizabeth Render, Stella Hector, Rose Serio, Mary Louise Hartneck, and Joan Conlin prove their solutions of quadratic equations at the blackboard. Students seated in their places busy themselves in solving similar problems. Algebra is a required subject for these young Hallahanites.

Our Banners Unfurl

Hallahan sophomores, rich in hope and ambition, are happy in their new surroundings. They face strange new subjects such as biology and geometry with assurance. They have discriminating taste in choosing their electives. Their eagerness to belong shines out from the blue and white of their emblems. They are sincere in their studies and realize how much Hallahan depends upon them.

Plane geometry is a required subject for all sophomores and they plunge into the study of it eagerly. Theresa McDonald and Elizabeth Duigan explain the bisector of the intersected circles to Helen Feeney. Mental alertness is one of the important by-products of the study of geometry.

The Hallahan library provides interest and enjoyment for all students. Here, Sister Consuelo, S.M., school librarian, explains the card index to an interested second year English class. Listening attentively are Joan Carney, Cecilia O'Rourke, and Theresa Respase.

In family living classes sophomores learn the essentials of good housekeeping. Clare Beck, Mary Brown, and Rita Buchanan help assemble a patchwork quilt.

Sophomores also experiment in designing. Here Catherine Welsh, Regina Rowan, and Louise Tomassi are arranging a bedroom.

Among the elective subjects for second year, sophomores may choose modern European history. In their classes they are given an opportunity to compare modern history with Church history. Clara Boegler points out some important facts about the Declaration of Independence.

Sophomores turn back the pages of the past to follow the details of the development of monasticism. Such key words as hermit, ascetic, and St. Benedict take on new meaning through instruction vitalized by illustrative material and modern textbooks.

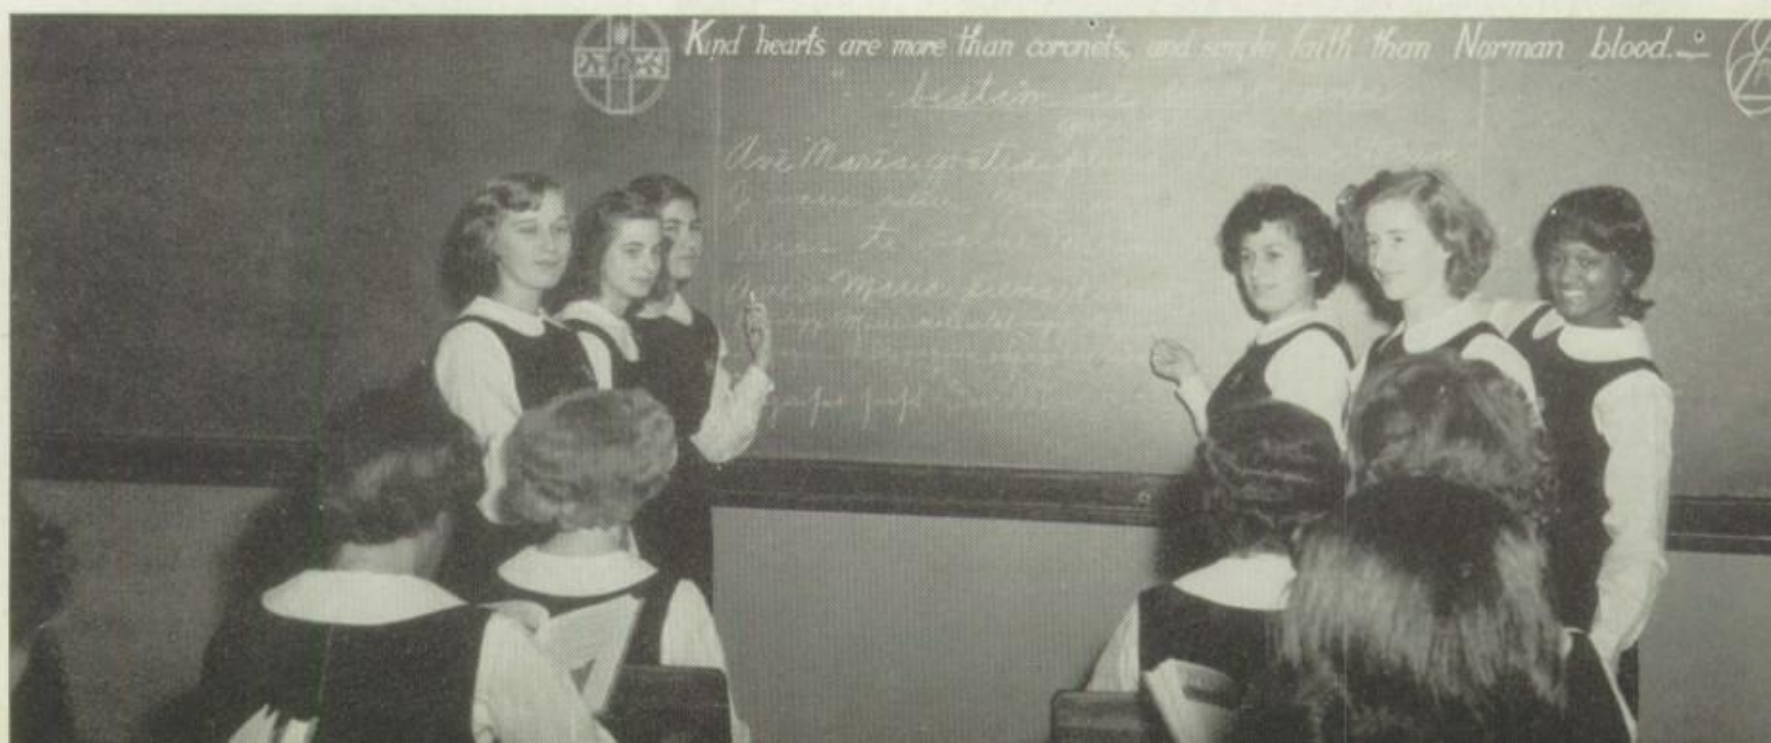

Activity period buzzes in the homeroom with hand inspection during health period on Tuesday morning. Monday finds the faculty and students busy about transportation for the week as the sale of P.T.C. tickets takes place. Class time finds youthful linguists learning and applying ways to achieve a French vocabulary.

Sophomore Teresa Crofts and classmates discover a brand new world through the lens of the microscope in biology class. Sr. M. Elise helps one of them to adjust her mechanism. Below, they demonstrate in religion class proof of the prophetic words of the "Magnificat"—the "Ave Maria" in varied languages.

Onward Our Banners Lead

Margaret Smith holds a bottle from which all the air has been taken, and Marie Amato holds the water tube as they prepare to do an experiment in air pressure. Diane Di Nardo and Catherine Munjat watch the proceedings with interest.

Wearing their new golden emblems, juniors take their places on the road to their final goal. This year they are able to select courses that will aid them in their future work. Those choosing a business career look to our commercial courses. Girls wishing to further their education select languages, sciences, and mathematics. Juniors can look forward to a year of new experiences and a year full of fun. This year is one of decision and happy anticipation.

Junior language students participate in many plays and programs. Here, a scene from the famous comedy, "Le Voyage de Monsieur Perrichon," is enacted by our French students. Passenger Bernadette McInnis is seen buying tickets from ticketmaster Concetta del Vecchio as other passengers Loretta Moffa, Rita Ricciuti, and Gertrude Carocci stand by.

Junior physicists give their undivided attention as Geraldine Marks demonstrates how Archimedes' principles of flotation are applied to a hydrogen filled balloon in the air, as well as to objects which float on water. Among those most interested are Adelaide Higgins, Mary Ann Feoli, Margaret Giordano, and Mary Mood.

Latin Club with junior and senior members draws an alert and active membership. Frances Ryan and Elizabeth Horvath follow with attention a program planned for the monthly meeting. Juniors Mary Grace Byrne, Elizabeth Chapman, Mary Sue McCormick, and Rita Bergmeister are also intent spectators.

Junior art students have already proved themselves worthy successors to their senior sisters. Jean Ostertag, Josephine Canonico, and Joan Ford are working diligently. Another field of creative work that juniors contribute to is the annual literary edition of the yearbook, "Silver Sands." An English class examines last year's copy before beginning their work for the next issue. Juniors below prove their familiarity with the background history of the American navy. Pictures and illustrations highlighting the contrast between yesterday and today enliven this class period in the subject about which students can say "This is our country"—United States History.

Juniors take a first step toward their future careers in mastering the intricacies of the keyboard.

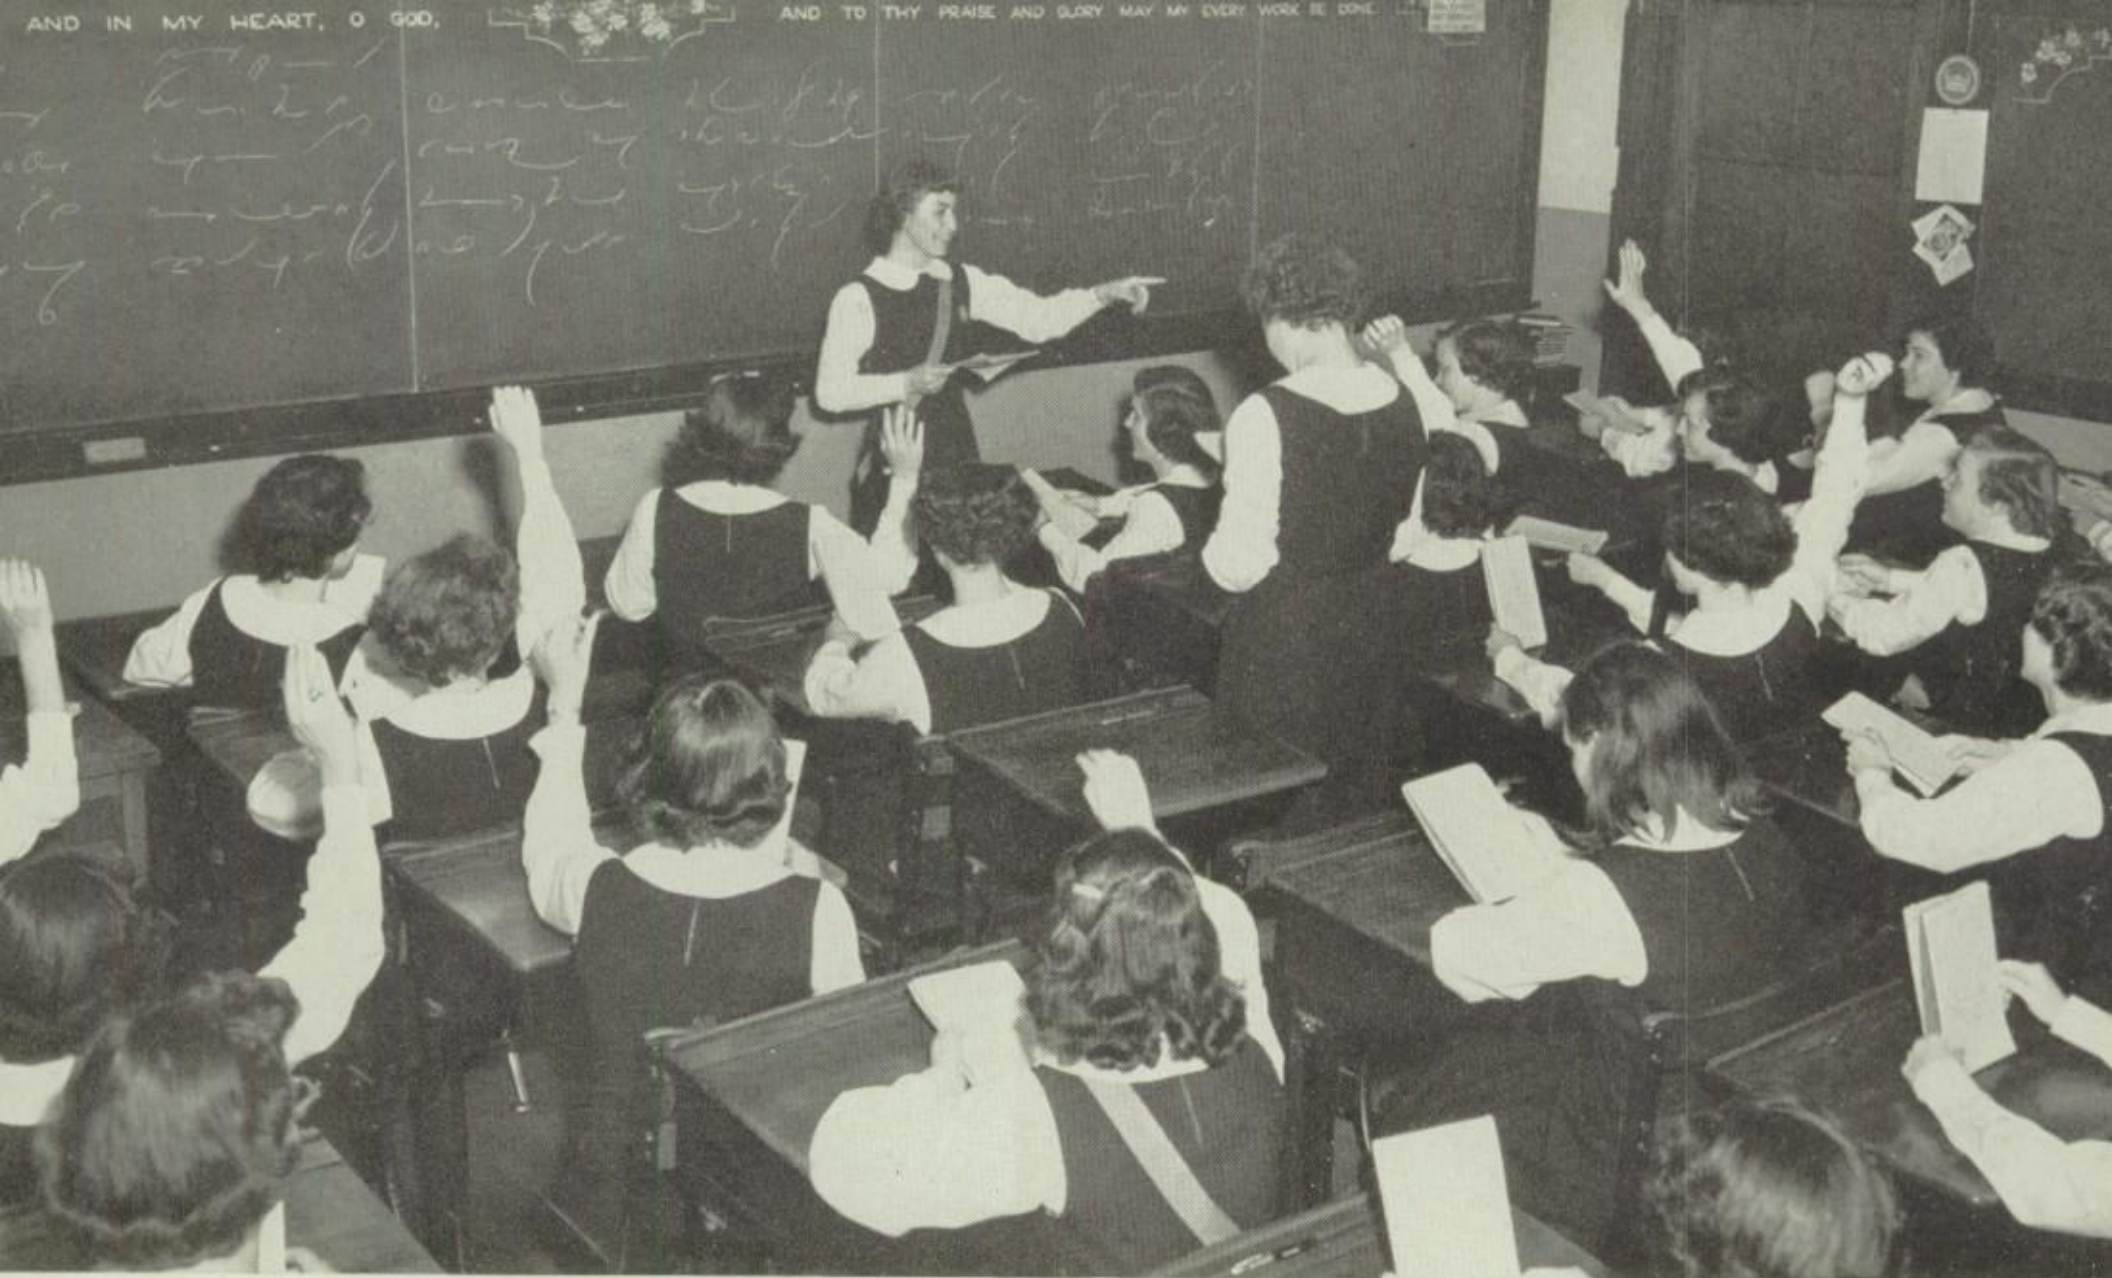

These music students are advancing far into their chosen field. Some of the steps along the way are the study of the theory of music and its history. Here, juniors delve into the theory, with Patricia Markey calling attention to the chords, while Patricia Querubin demonstrates the use of the keyboard.

"¿Habla vo. Espanol?" is the question that Nancy Friel puts to this alert Spanish class. Conversational Spanish is one of the most emphasized points in the instruction, which is taught with the genuine Castilian pronunciation.

This Stenography I Class is engrossed in the constructions which are to be translated at sight from the blackboard.

Marie Mazzu conducts her classmates in reviewing the day's lesson.

With the introduction of the Rosary Crusade, the chapel resounds continually with the prayers of Hallahan's children.

Here, Patricia Duffy and Leonette Shepper stop for a visit before going home.

Our Banners Wave Above Them

The seniors have finally reached the year so eagerly awaited. They wear with pride the red and white emblem, symbol of their achievement. As the oldest of their schoolmates, they carry the traditions of the school with joy. Whether they are pursuing the commercial or academic courses, they have proved that they are conscientious workers. Their minds are crowded with exciting thoughts of activities and plans for their future careers. Regardless of their vocations, they know they will always remember the happiest years of their lives—their years at Hallahan.

Catholic newspapers and periodicals help to keep our students up to date and they present to them the Catholic viewpoint. One of these is "Our Sunday Visitor". A senior religion class reviews the current edition, scanning every page. Agnes Laskey reads aloud an interesting article. Also absorbed in the paper are Mary Dardanelli, Mary Ellen McCarthy, Dorothy Ljoka, and Nancy Mulcahy. Hallahan supports the Catholic press.

Studying the German language is more than translating and conjugating. The students also learn customs and quaint traditions of the people. Joan Miller, Miriam Beck, Ann Marshall, Anne Connolly, Katherine Etzel, Alice Kilfeather, and Frances Ehling enjoy the Christmas folk tunes.

GOING INTO ACTION FOR PHYSICAL FITNESS.

This chemistry class experiments with the use of carbon dioxide. Marceda Sicenavage and Elizabeth Kehoe extinguish a fire with the CO_2 while Theresa Mazeika and Alice McMahon are attempting to collect their compound in bottles.

Marie Quinn, Mary Regina Furia, Mary Twardy, and some of their classmates found a stairway to adventure in the Logan Library. The girls are returning from a trip behind the scenes where they found both old and new collections of books supplementing their study of English. Visits to the periodical division, music library, and Braille collection were included in their tour. They were impressed by the new worlds they found in books and the extraordinary opportunities available to those who enjoy reading.

The Shakespeare Memorial in Logan Square merits a few moments of admiration from Isabelle Cavanaugh and Peggy Breida. With the inspiration of the poet's immortal words, these seniors are reminded that they are about to take their places on the stage of life.

Mary Falkenstein and Christine De Julius play French records for some deeply interested French students. The records help to stimulate a better understanding of the language and also provide a measure of enjoyment.

SENIORS STUDYING NATIONAL PROBLEMS SHOW SPECIAL INTEREST IN A MAP OF THE UNITED STATES. CORRINE KISSANE INDICATES SIGNIFICANT PLACES TO CLASSMATES MAY TYRELL, GERALDINE WILSON, ROSINA COLONNESE AND GLORIA D'ULISSE.

The Logan Library, only a few steps from Hallahan, offers much in the way of information otherwise unattainable. Here one can find not only the latest books but also long preserved copies and originals of manuscripts. Seen studying a first edition of Charles Dickens are Teresa Mazeika, Marion Kochs, Eleanor Connors, Marianne Davis, Madeline Streibig, and Marie De Lisle.

Our Art Department produces many fine artists who, in turn, produce many fine pieces of work and annually bring renown to the school as prize-winning participants in citywide contests. Busy on the Christmas posters are Elizabeth Cimino, Patricia Hinphey, Elouise Thomas, Anna Bland, and Kathleen White.

Every year, Hallahan participates in the Junior Town Meeting of the Air. Frances Ehling, Hallahan representative, upheld the affirmative side of the topic, "Should the age for leaving school be lowered?" Dr. Newbolde Cooper, vice-president of Girard College, was moderator of this program broadcast from the Hallahan auditorium.

Hallahan seniors take an active part in the WIP Quiz Class. In this picture they are answering questions concerning national shrines, about which they were well informed. They came home victorious.

Those who have any hopes at all of becoming other Einsteins have many obstacles to overcome. One important step that must be mastered is mathematics. This class reviews the familiar problems concerning a regular pyramid. Edith Crossin displays the figure in question, while Rita M. Severino calls on some alert volunteers.

The visit to the Burroughs Company finds the transcription class willing and eager to learn. Rosemarie Fratrik, Annette Giglio, and Catherine Grant have front row places for the occasion.

Improvements are continually aiding today's secretaries. One of the latest is the electric typewriter. Here, Geraldine Farrant demonstrates the machine and the motor switch while Amelia Locke awaits her turn. Frances Ehling, Alice Fennen, Susanne Oebbecke, and Ann McBride eagerly take notes on their findings.

In the office practice class, Evelyn Kowalchuk weighs her package on the postage scale, while the class notes the charges. More packages are waiting to be checked and the cost determined.

The Bookkeeping II class gains experience in operating adding machines in their classroom. Jane Hamska, Joan Laughlin, and Rosemary McDonald work with the machines while the class prepares a worksheet which will be checked later. This will all prove helpful when these students are out in offices.

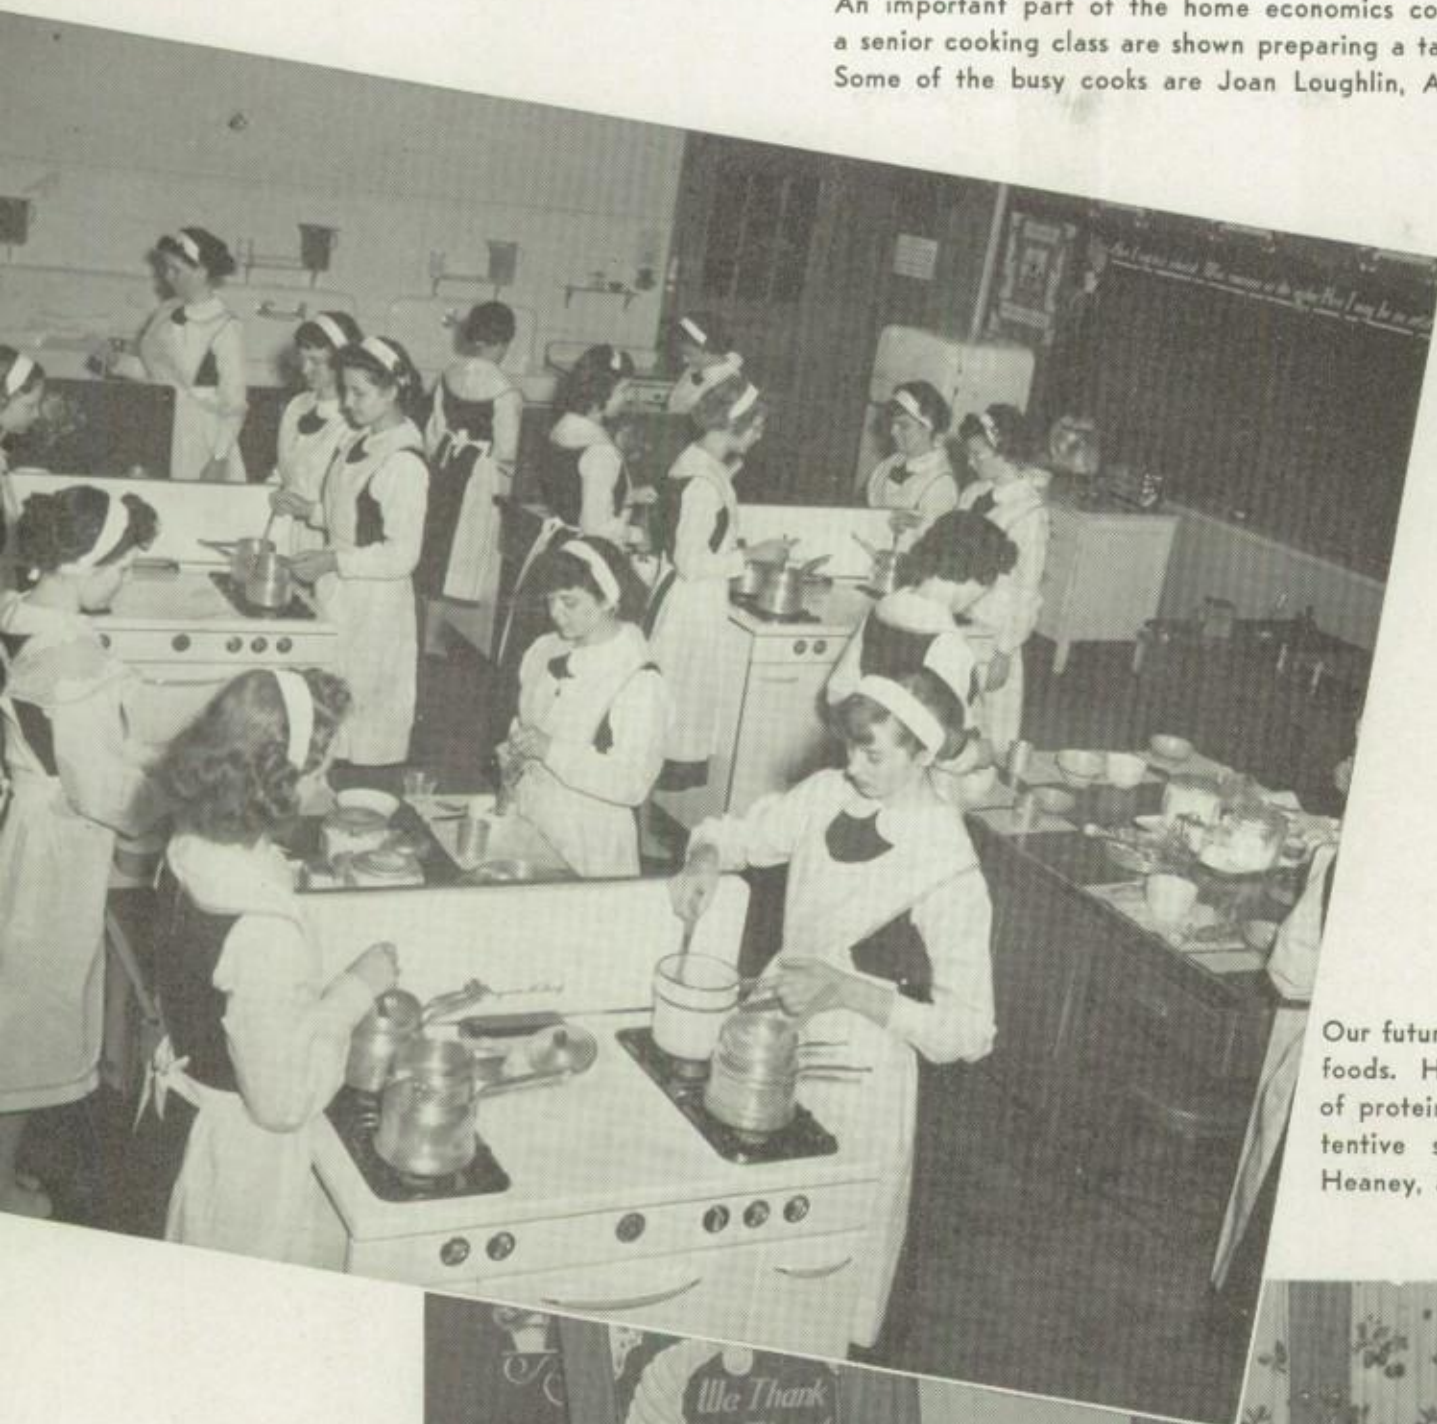

A most frequent and essential practice of the transcription class is, of course, transcribing. Here it is done both silently and vocally. Some of the volunteers who will give their preparations are Diana Kurkis, Alma Lowitz, Helen Daly, Mary Corr, and Jeanne Cunningham. This attentive class follows every word in checking their work.

Thorough preparation for the future is given in the home economics course. Here Sister John Michael demonstrates how to pin a hem as Margaret Sinichak and Constance Shevlin watch. Below, Mary Jane Hennessy, Helen Clothier, and Helen Decker are pictured laundering.

An important part of the home economics course is preparing foods. These members of a senior cooking class are shown preparing a tasty dish that will be tempting to the palate. Some of the busy cooks are Joan Loughlin, Anne Dunn, and Rosemarie Henderson.

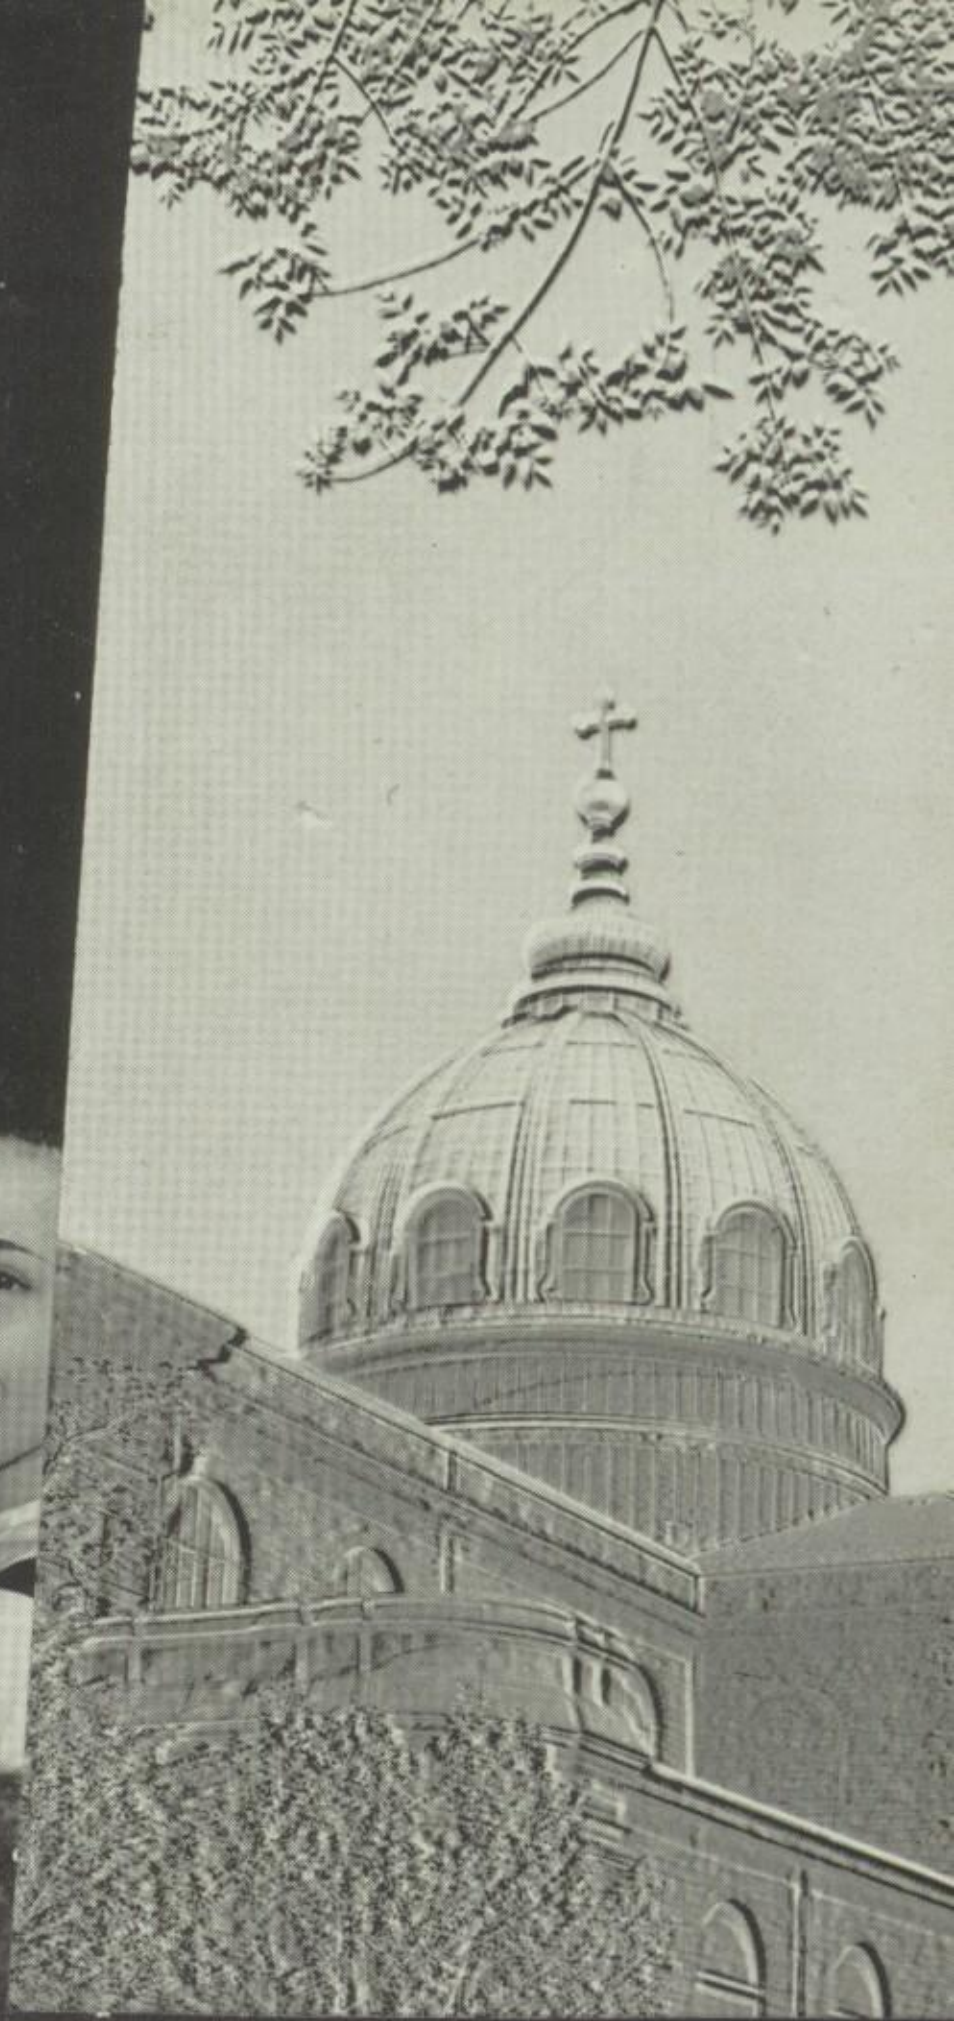

Our future homemakers learn the value of different foods. Here Anne Vollman explains the necessity of proteins by means of a chart. Some of the attentive students are Helen Murphy, Margaret Heaney, and Helen Decker.

Representatives

Lucky number seven is doubled for us. Our prize winning combination lies in our fourteen senior representatives. They play an indispensable role in the functioning of our student life and are always ready to lead in homeroom and school activities. They are Loretta Apple 1A, Isabelle Cavanaugh 2A, Mary Cosgrove 3A, Marie De Vita 4A, Eleanor Fay 5A, Rose Marie Graziosi 6A, Dorothy Kalinowski 7A, Eugenia Loshnowsky 8A, Marie McCarthy 9A, Alice McMahon 10A, Helen Petrucci 11A, Marion Rossi 12A, Eileen Tamulis 13A, and Dorothy Zack 14A.

Activities Girls

An organization re-introduced in Hallahan is the Activities Girls. Their aid in general activities and exercises of the school helps to make possible our smoothly running system. The group is composed of one member from each of the fourteen senior homerooms: Patricia Brindley 2A, chairman, Peggy Breida 1A, Dlores Clements 3A, Helen Donovan 4A, Sally Feola 5A, Margaret Heaney 6A, Margaret Kemme 7A, Dorothy Ljoka 8A, Margaret McGuire 9A, Nancy Mulcahy 10A, Anne Pearce 11A, Rosemarie Scheer 12A, Elizabeth Staats 13A, and Marie Uhl 14A.

Sand Script Tells the Hallahan Story

Editor Mary Condon, left, is surrounded by members of the "Sand Script" staff. Dolores Putz, Rita M. Severino, Marie Waldron, Barbara Franzen, Octavia Casaccio, and Anna Garson check the latest edition. Senior newswriters, responsible during the year for all issues except the last one, which the juniors publish, are eager to see in print the results of their news coverage.

"Sand Script", the official school paper, has, for eighteen years, served as the trumpet which heralds all the activities Hallahan takes part in. Contests of sport and skill, the curricular and extra-curricular activities of the various departments, and items of general interest are reported for posterity in its pages. The editorial page is devoted to a timely topic concerning the spiritual and temporal interests of the students. "Sand Script" is published seven times during the year.

Silver Sands

Chosen as editor for the 1951 "Silver Sands", Ruth Krause is pictured looking over the recent edition of the literary magazine.

In the midyear literary edition of "Silver Sands", the students are given an opportunity every year to express their creative ability in writing and in art. This year's book emphasized the theme of the Assumption of our Blessed Mother. "Assumpta est Maria" is the keynote throughout the issue. The lining sheet depicts Mary in the glory of that title, receiving her crown. The close cooperation of the Art and English Departments makes possible the finished product.

"Silver Sands", the official record book of Hallahan, leads the way in school publications. Since 1917, this book has been published for succeeding classes. Although at first there was only one volume issued each year, it soon developed into two. In 1931, the first literary edition was published. The midyear literary edition contains prose and poetry contributed by all the English classes. The record book at the end of the school year is the pictorial remembrance of the activities and happenings during the year. Both the literary and the record book editions of "Silver Sands" are awaited and received with gratifying enthusiasm and appreciation.

Once more, Town Hall resounded with generous applause as the audiences showed their appreciation of the blue and white clad concert band. Mr. Benjamin d'Amelio has heard many fine musical organizations since the establishment of the Music Department, but he considers this year's band one of the best. Wearing Mary's colors, they honored her by Schubert's "Ave Maria." "Coronation March" from "Le Prophet", the lively "Lady of Spain", and the famous "Il Guarany Overture" delighted everyone.

Stirring Music in Band Rhythm

MR. BENJAMIN D'AMELIO
CONDUCTOR

These Are Our Music Makers

There is a proud ring in the voice of every Hallahanite when she speaks of our orchestra. This organization, comprised of students who study music as a major subject, is one of Hallahan's proudest boasts. Under the direction of Dr. Jenó Donath, this year's orchestra upheld the high standards set when it was first founded. Splendid renditions of such selections as the second "L'Arlesienne Suite," "Beautiful Galathea Overture," and Victor Herbert melodies justly deserved the warm reception they received. A special feature was "Voci di Primavera" sung by guest soloist Giovanna Romana, a Hallahan alumna. Many of our orchestra members also hold prominent places in the Combined Musicale held annually in May.

Singers of Melodious Songs

One of the featured highlights of the annual Hallahan musicale is the program given by the Glee Club. For this concert, students from every year are eligible. Sister Agnes Anita, S.S.J., is the vocal instructor. This year's selections showed variety in rhythm and theme. Included among them was "Eternal Life," a prayer of St. Francis of Assisi, dedicated to Monsignor Bonner in memory of the fifth anniversary of his death. Dr. Jeno Donath was the conductor. The glee club is one of the most active extracurricular groups in the school, as members participate in the Combined Musicale and appear on radio and television programs as well. In the foreground is Margaret Burns, one of the soloists.

Students from the sophomore, junior, and senior classes have ample opportunity to participate in the activities of the verse choir under the inspired direction of Miss Margaret Mary Kearney. The choir provides a training ground for those girls interested in dramatics and speech improvement. Hallahan claims the distinction of being one of the first schools in America to organize a verse speaking choir. Membership in this organization implies enthusiasm for group appreciation of those types of poetry and poetic prose best suited to communal interpretations. The members of the 1950-1951 verse choir were featured in readings at Temple University and in a concert at the Academy of Music with the Philadelphia Orchestra. Outstanding members of the verse choir are selected for the senior play and for participation in radio broadcasts.

Pageant of Glory

The tableau used for the finale of Hallahan's tenth annual musicale symbolized the powers of intercession of Mary, Queen of the World. The finale selection, "Preludes to Eternity," honored her Assumption into heaven. Mary, in her Immaculate Conception, is man's brightest hope. She stands ready to intercede, ready to bring peace and freedom to the world.

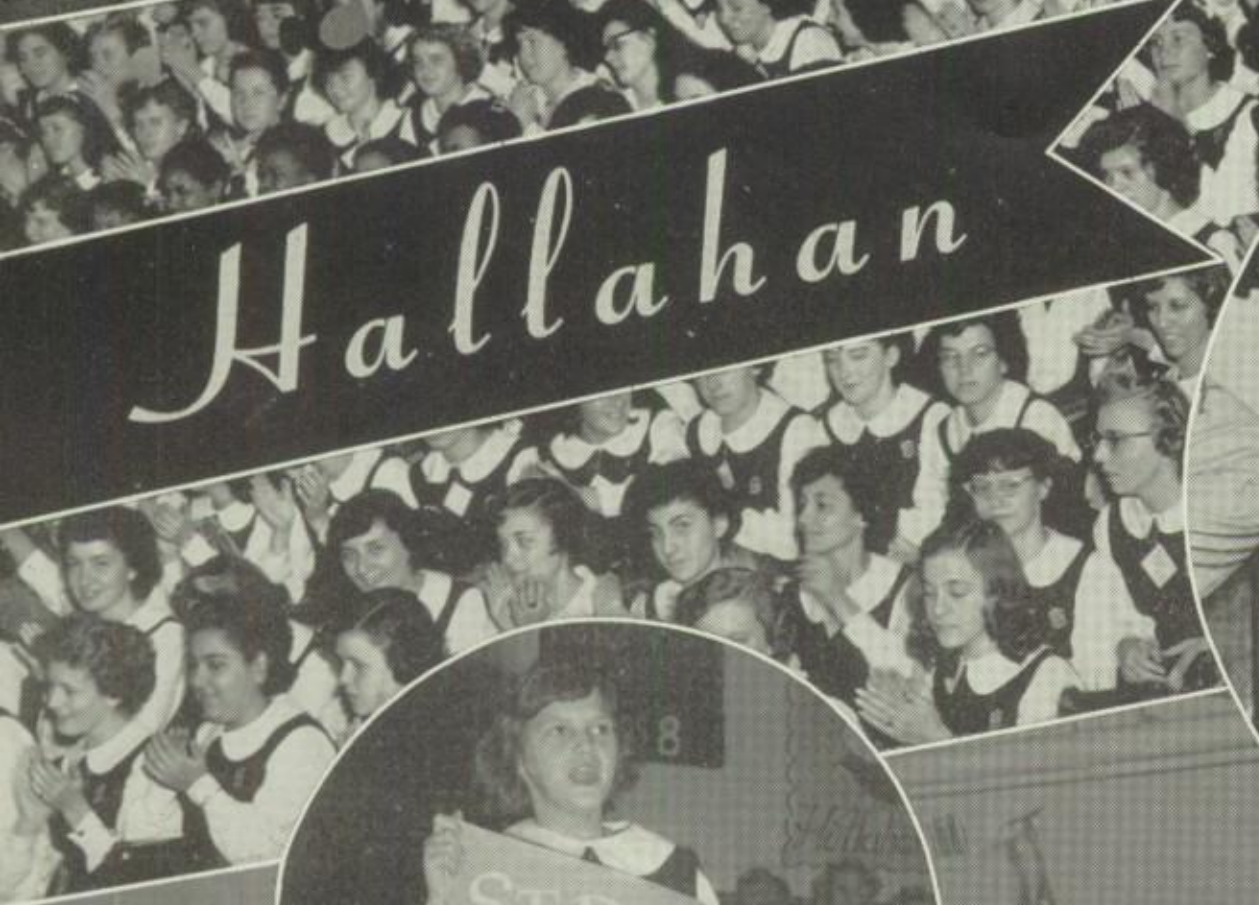

Included in the group were the orchestra and the vocal ensemble under the direction of Dr. Jeno Donath. The soloist was Margaret P. Burns.

Basketeers

Rating top score in Hallahan sports is basketball. Keen competition during a busy season keeps the Blue and Whikers on their toes. Good sportsmanship and a challenging fighting spirit make them esteemed opponents on the floor in league and non-league games, and enthusiastic fans salute them with cheers as they write their names in Hallahan's sports history.

MARIE WALDRON, M.C.

Reverend Anthony Ostheimer and Dr. Newbold Cooper of Girard College moderate a broadcast of the Junior Town Meeting of the Air in the Hallahan auditorium. Frances Ehling discussed the chosen topic with students of public and private high schools.

Publications editors Mary Condon and Ruth Krause are happy in securing the autograph of Reverend James G. Keller, M. M., director of the Christopher Movement and well-known author, after his address at the third annual Catholic Press Conference at Villanova College. Three Hallahan seniors participated in the program. Nancy Shields discussed the theme of a yearbook; Patricia Hinphey talked in support of literary magazines; and Mary Condon considered the question: "How Catholic Are Our Newspapers?"

In the name of the student body, Mary Condon accepted the first prize award, a television set, won by Hallahan and presented by Mr. David Schmid of the Sales Managers' Association, for the greatest student participation in the annual selling contest.

Hallahan received a double honor when Mary Condon won first prize in the citywide contest, "What Advertising Means to Me," and Patricia Agger, a junior, placed fifth. The girls are examining their certificates. More than three thousand entries were submitted.

Experiences of Value That Endure

Reverend Edward M. Reilly, Diocesan Superintendent of Schools, reads the blessing imposed on the class rings before they are presented to the students. The blessing is the climax of the annual ring ceremony held in the auditorium. Senior Activities Girls hold the rings for their individual homeroom sections. This is one of the happiest and most solemn moments for the seniors, for the ring symbolizes all that is most cherished in their Catholic education.

During the year Mr. Louis A. Leslie, author of "Gregg Shorthand Simplified," visited some of the Gregg transcription classes. The stenographers are pictured applying some of the suggestions Mr. Leslie gave for building up speed for the 140-word speed test, while he discusses general methods with Sister Alice Patrice.

Dolores Clements accepts from Miss Catherine Sutterly the first prize, a $25 defense bond, for her poster submitted in the citywide contest sponsored by the Philadelphia Catholic Literature Group on the theme "Ageless Books for Every Age." The presentation was made at a meeting in the Logan Library.

Hallahan seniors continued their annual production of Broadway successes in presenting Rosemary Casey's "The Velvet Glove" under the direction of Miss Margaret Mary Kearney. William Dempsey as Bishop Gregory and Joan Edmondson as Reverend Mother gave evidence of extraordinary acting ability. A fine supporting cast contributed to the satisfactory untangling of Reverend Mother's problems plus those which involve the love interest in the minor plot.

Lady of Hallahan Queen of the May

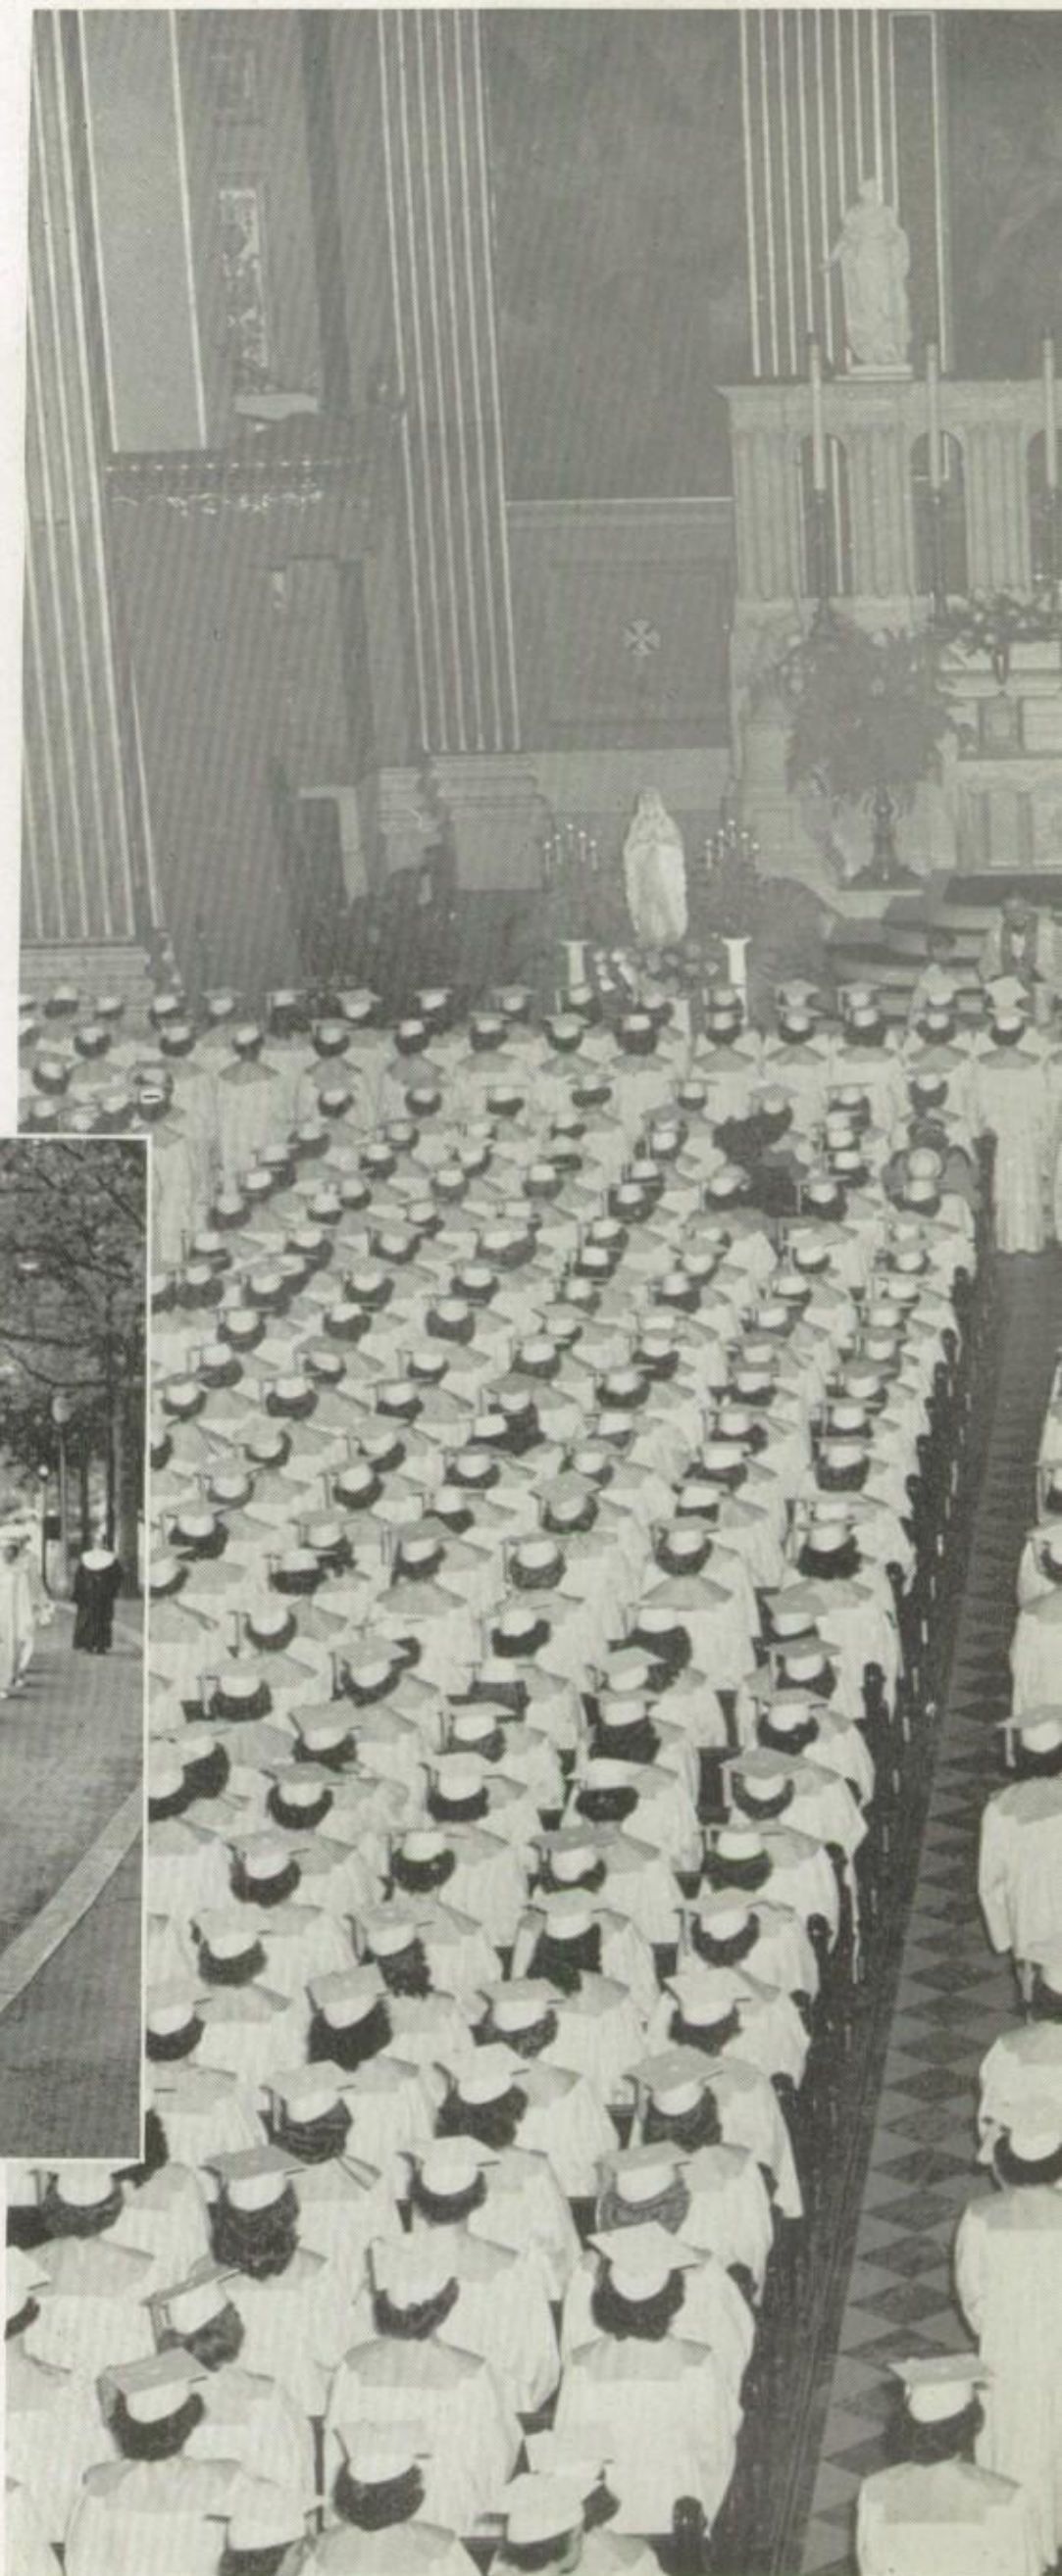

The May procession, Hallahan's annual tribute to Our Virgin Mother, continues to be one of its loveliest traditions. With a May queen selected by the senior class, and a court representing all senior sections, Our Lady, Queen of the May, was honored. Flowers were placed before her shrine and Mary was crowned by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Hubert Cartwright, pastor of the Cathedral.

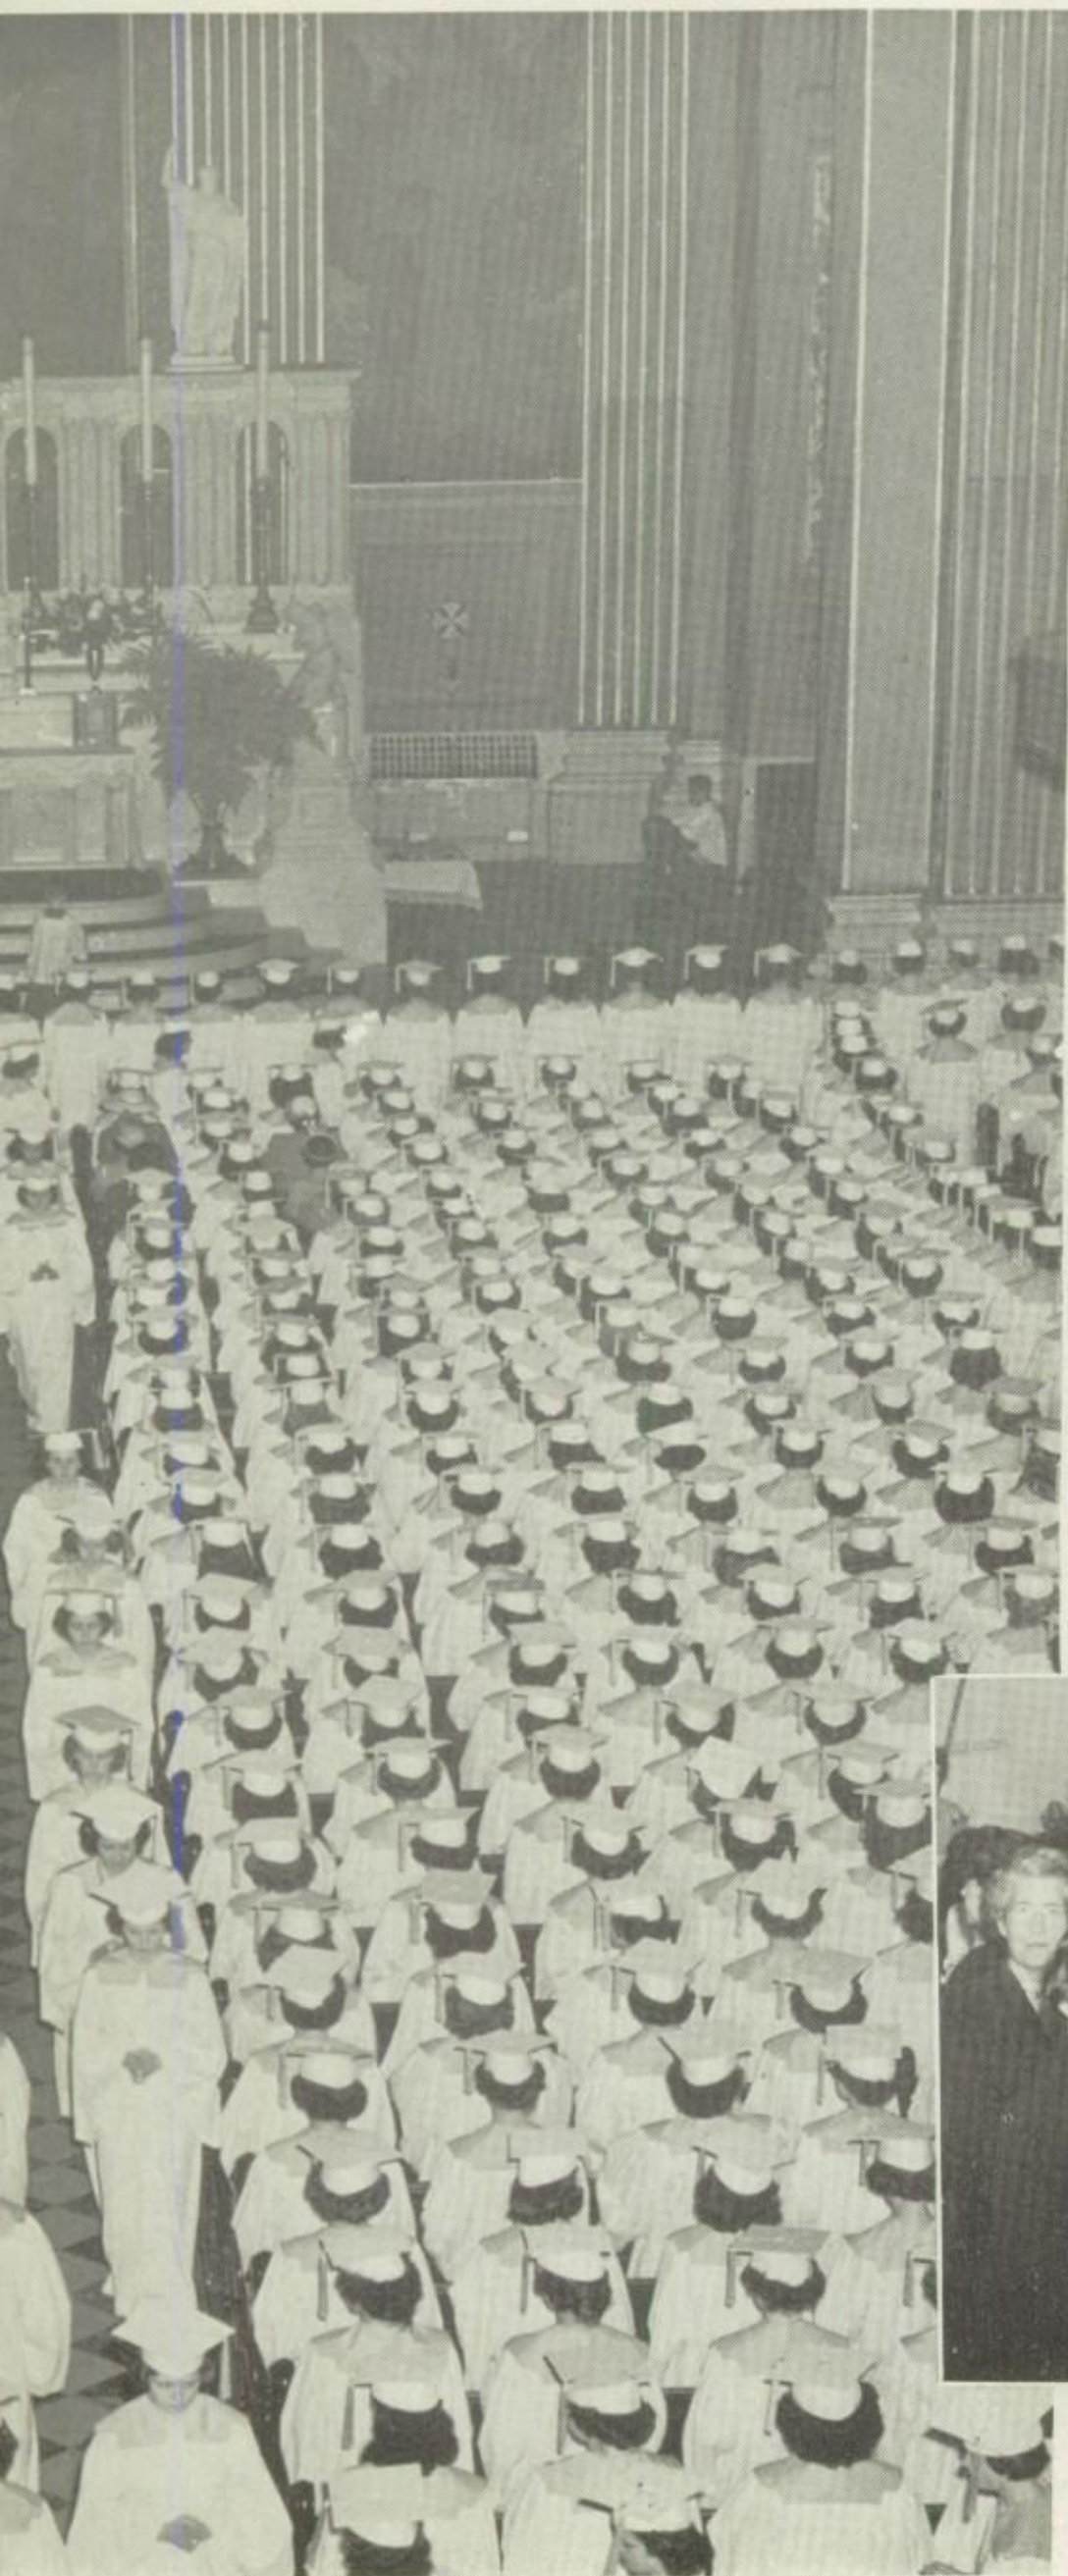

United in Faith

Mothers who are alumnae members attend Mass and receive Communion with them.
A great tradition from a great school—Hallahan.

Let Our Lamp Now Outgleam

Act of Consecration

TO THE IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY

O Immaculate Heart of Mary,—Queen of Heaven and Earth,—and tender Mother of men,—in accordance with thy ardent wish made known at Fatima,—I consecrate to thee myself,—my brethren,—my country,—and the whole human race. Reign over us students of the John W. Hallahan Catholic Girls' High School—and teach us how to make the Heart of Jesus—reign and triumph in us and around us,—as It has reigned and triumphed in thee. Reign over us, dearest Mother,—that we may be thine in prosperity and in adversity;—in joy and in sorrow;—in health and in sickness;—in life and in death. O most compassionate Heart of Mary,—Queen of Virgins,—watch over our minds and hearts—and preserve them from the deluge of impurity—which thou didst lament so sorrowfully at Fatima. We want to be pure like thee. We want to atone—for the many crimes committed against Jesus and thee. We want to call down upon our Country—and the whole human race—the peace of God in justice and charity. Therefore,—we now promise to imitate thy virtues—by the practice of a Christian life—without regard to human respect.
